"It's very focused on some of those critical baccalaureate degree areas like nursing and teaching where there are enormous needs in this state."
— Former Nevada System of Higher Education Regent Jill Derby, on why Nevada State College shouldn't be shuttered during the economic crisis.

N-48-10

"Guest expectations are rising, we know that, and what was good yesterday may not be good today or tomorrow."
— Atlantic Casino Resort Spa CEO John Farahi, on the importance of reinvesting in your property to remain competitive.

"Currently we have a 200-megawatt wind farm that's in the process of being built. It's being permitted right now and that's up on the Idaho-Nevada border. We need to get that wind energy down to Las Vegas. We need to harness even more of the geothermal energy that's up in the Reno area to bring down south."
— NV Energy Senior Vice President Tony Sanchez, discussing why NV Energy wants to build a north-south transmission line in Nevada to enhance its use of renewable energy.

"I think the critical area is education. I think the public is going to be extremely agitated about it and rightly so. Taxes that can generate revenue quickly will be the first to be looked at such as the payroll tax and perhaps even the sales tax."
— Jim Wadhams of law firm Jones Vargas, on how the Legislature is likely to look at closing the budget gap.
